rouse, we see that every where political feeling has disappeared, and friends and opponents have united to interchange their sympathies at the flow of a patriof of aid troub taken from his cauntry. It is a startious and topchine pathes at the Jose of a patrier of sud ly taken from his country. It is a glo-se and touching spectacle, at which ave-different most be proud. Thank God, tited reastiments stop at the partal of tours. your regret at the death of a Chief maga-trate. But I have come, not only to per-form that duty, but to mourn, the loss of a private friend. It is more than forty years since I first knew him, and almost 30 since the chief friendship and could since I first knew him, and simple and could be admitted to his friend-hip and could dence. I have served under him in war, and with him in peace; and over during and ov influence and opinion, to delead his pecilia more fame from the attacks of his owe come trymen. But so it is, and I shall discharge the duty. While he fired he was himself competent to the track. It did not become any one to push himself for ward-as a valuator, and to claim the privilege of appropriating to himself his cause. But he is beyond the reach of minutany, as he is beyond the reach of minutany, as he is beyond the powersof correcting it. His friends may now act such upon his own ecoponishility. His memory is dear to me, and I engerly embrace this opportunity of recenting it from various charges, which either originated, or were revived and propagated during the late Presidential convers. And I son the more free to do this, because I know the anxisty he felt apos the subject. He would have been unworthy of his high position, had he been middlerent to it; and through a common friend, communicated to me the wish that I would prepare a narrative of the battle of the Tuames. But the request and the compliance were made after his clevation to the Chief Magistracy; and every generous mind will understand why I could not then give as free a scope, to my feedings.

of war at Sandwich, and the battle of the Thames, were the prominent measures of the campaign, which have provoked the sewerest crincism. All the facts connected with the former were within my personal knowledge. I was in the camp at Senera, nice mites from Sandusky at the time, and I well recollect walking in the sovirous with General Harrison, listening for the antity with which he awaited the result. I shall not go into the reasons which prevented him from marching to the relief of the little stocknided past which defended at self so gloriously. These are consigned to the bistory of the times. But their general bearing will be abvious, when it is recollected that our forces were few, and had been heatily collected; that arrangements were unalting to fornish us with reinforcements from all parts of the West, and that magazines were forming, and supplies prements from all parts of the West, and that magazines were forming, and supplies pre paring for the accomplishment of our whi mate object—that the invasion of Canada, as soo as the state of the arrangements, and the anticipated command of the lake should coable us to move forward with a reasonable bape of success; that the strength of the enemy in regular troops, militin, or Indiana, was wholly unknown to as and that upon our position rested the mittin, ar Indiana, was wholly unknown to us, and that upon our pusition rusted the last hope of safety for the frontier, for we were the point of concentration, and had we been destroyed, the country would have been laid state almost to Prackintown, and the prosecution of another measure compaign, during that year, would have been rendered repossible. These interests were too great to be put to hazard by a belle measurement of Con Hazard by a large of the concentration of the concentrat
